

Course module Global Nursing within the Bachelor Program in Nursing

In the fifth semester of the Bachelor Program in Nursing at the Swedish Red Cross University, students attend a course module called Global Nursing. The course comprises an in-depth view of the concept of global nursing in health care and addresses global and local aspects within the caring environment. The overall aims and goals of the course that are related to international experiences, include

- Gaining understanding about the Red Cross Red Crescent global humanitarian movement and other humanitarian organizations,
- Problematizing and proposing how the content of global nursing and a global nursing approach can be developed in theory and clinical practice from a sustainable perspective,
- Investigating care setting situations from a global nursing perspective, focusing on advocacy, social activism, inequalities, and social injustice,
- Reflecting on health professionals' approach from a norm critical perspective.

For the students to fulfill these goals, it is valuable to get the opportunity to visit an organization and follow its activities for 2 weeks. This experience provides the students with better knowledge about how such organization approach health challenges and vulnerability within the community.

The purpose of the field study is to link previously acquired theoretical knowledge to observations. This experience is presented in a report. The students are expected to reflect upon the organization's activities in relation to the above goals and to focus on advocacy and social activism in the context of existing inequalities and social injustices. It is important to note that the field study and the report do not aim to evaluate the work and the quality of a particular organization.

The Swedish Red Cross University is grateful for your organization's willingness to host our student/s. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact the Swedish Red Cross University at ic@rkh.se.
